

Berry Electrical

Berry Electrical are an electrical contracting company based in Sandown on the Isle of Wight. Mike Berry phoned the College in march 2006 looking for a bespoke course for approximately nine of their employees to do a refresher in inspection, testing and certification.

Mike and Steve Lambourne from Berry Electrical came into IW College to meet with CLO and Derek McGrath (electrical curriculum leader) to discuss training their employees on employees in 'hands on' testing and certification paperwork. At the end of the course they wanted to make sure each delegate undertook a practical assessment and was college certificated for competency.

Derek McGrath put together a training programme and proposal costed by CLO and submitted to Berry Electrical and agreement was reached for the course to start in the Autumn Term of 2006. After the first session verbal feedback from trainer and employees was fed back to Berry Electrical. As the course was a 'one-off' short bespoke course, it was felt that no adjustments were needed.

The College subsequently received a letter from Mike Berry saying how pleased they were with the course and the positive impact it had on their employees, some of whom are now interested in taking up more formal qualifications.
